

For my classes, I will be posting weekly assignments or tasks on Google Classroom:

11th Grade English should expect Noredink.com or Khan Academy grammar practice, weekly writing assignments, or articles/ literary passages to read and respond to. I will also probably attempt to hold online class sessions with any juniors who wish to participate in my WGU capstone research project. This project will be centered around the research paper that they are supposed to write this year. I am not sure yet if I will send videos of instruction, or host a zoom or google hangout to provide instruction. Any students who agree to be a part of this will be exempt from the other weekly assignments.

College Prep Seniors should expect assignments based on our current reading: "The Last Lecture", creative writing assignments, reflective writing assignments and/or articles/ literary passages to respond to. They should also be looking out for senior paper results to be posted on skyward in the upcoming weeks, and potentially an email from me concerning any necessary rewrites.

6th Grade Social Studies should expect assignments from readworks.org or junior scholastic to appear on Google Classrooms stream. I am still working on ways to implement some project ideas for this class. I will be updating the stream regularly to keep students and families posted.

Both sections of World History should expect assignments from Khan Academy and readworks.org to come across the classroom stream. As well as other History related projects that may include making videos and/or other projects to photograph for proof of completion. There may also be some longer writing responses concerning materials that I will send out.

As always I am reachable by my email: brandynb@willapavalley.org or by comment on Google Classroom.
